DARKEN GRAY HAIR, LOOK YOUNG, PRETTY

Sage Tea and Sulphur Darkens So Naturally That Nobody Can Tell.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or which it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmothers made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful and the thousands of women and men who value that even color that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of Wveth's Sage and Sulphur Compound which darkens the hair so naturally so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears but what delights the ladies with Wveth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.—Adv.

Like Being Hit By Rattle Snake

Says: that every time you cut or pick at a corn you invite lockjaw.

You remember men and women who are pestered with corns and who have to wait a week or more for relief from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cleveland authority to use a drug called Frozone which (3) moment a few drops are applied (4) any corn the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn root and all, lifts right out with the fingers, without one particle of pain.

This Frozone is a sticky substance which dries the moment it is applied and must be removed with the fingers, without one particle of pain.

Ouch! Such Pain!

It takes you right in the back! Sometimes in the arm, hip or foot. It's all due to an over-abundance of that poison, called uric acid. The kidneys are not able to get rid of it. Such conditions you can readily overcome, and prolong life by taking the advice of Doctor Pierce, which is, "keep the kidneys in good order." Avoid too much meat, alcohol or tea. Drink plenty of pure water, preferably hot water, before meals, and drive the uric acid out of the system by taking "Anuric." This can be obtained at any drug store, in tablet form.

Pennsville.

PENNSVILLE, July 8.—Owen Barnett of Hannastown visited at the home of his uncle James Barnett over the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Reagan and family of Greensburg and Mr. and Mrs. James Daugherty and family of Hannastown spent from Saturday until Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. James Reagan of this place.

Miss Billie Mer is spending a few days this week visiting Pittsburgh friends.

Mrs. Anna McClelland of East End was a Pennsville caller Wednesday afternoon.

Fred Redding and family of Punxsutawney returned home Tuesday from a few days' visit with Mr. Redding's parents Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Redding. The wife accompanied home by Mr. Redding, who will be with her until he returns from a short time.

Miss Frances Lenhart is spending a few days this week with her sister Mrs. William Henderson at McKeesport.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Halfhill Mr. and Mrs. Frank Richeberger and two children motored to Warren Ohio Thursday where they will remain until Sunday visiting friends.

Mrs. H. S. Conger of Uniontown visited her mother Mrs. Richer Hatbaugh Thursday.

Sunday services at the Pennsville United Evangelical church will be as follows: Sunday school 9:45; preaching services 10:45.

Mrs. Mary Orbin of Everson suffered a broken ankle Wednesday evening when she stepped into a hole in the road while on her way from the home of E. J. Urey to the street car station. She was taken home in Mr. Urey's automobile.

Protest Coal Car Order.
The farmhands of the Buffalo district have entered a strong protest against the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission giving priority to the movement of coal cars. Producers are freely made that furnace plants will be compelled to shut down unless some relief can be found in the way of modification of the order.

WORLD LOOKS TO UNITED STATES FOR ITS STEEL SUPPLY

Has Accumulation of Four Years' Needs to Be Provided.

WAR: EFFECT ON OUTPUT

Known Output: Steel—Only Country Producing; Can Be 50% Increasing Production Beyond Our Needs.

Upon the United States rests the responsibility of making up the tremendous worldwide shortage of iron and steel caused by the war, says Herbert F. Howell, in an article on "The International Market for Iron and Steel" which appears in the July issue of Commerce Monthly.

Mr. Howell points out that the vast quantities of iron and steel used in the making of war munitions have left the world with a four-year's accumulation of needs for such metals for industrial use. Great Britain alone of the European producing countries is unable of competing with this country in supplying this demand.

"The world is short of iron and steel," Mr. Howell says. "The United States, Great Britain and Germany produce 30 per cent or more of the total iron and steel output of the world, while Belgium is a considerable factor in the international market. The war had varying effects on the production of these three European countries. The case of Germany is clear. As a producer of iron and steel for the international market, that country need not be reckoned with at present. French production is dependent on German coal, and lack of fuel and industrial disorganization have kept it much below the pre-war level. The Belgian industry shows encouraging features and exports are increasing, but domestic demand is heavy, and the amount Belgium can export will not greatly affect the international market in the immediate future.

"The only active competitors of the American iron and steel producers at the present time are the iron-makers of the United Kingdom. Steel output in the United Kingdom during the first five months of 1920, although at a lower rate than in 1917, was above the rate for any other year. Exports of iron and steel must still increase before they reach the rate maintained in 1913. Remarkable increases over exports for 1919 are shown by the British figures for the first four months of 1920. Gains were made in all the items except six, the gains for the different classes of products ranging from eight per cent to over 400 per cent. The British position is improving, and must not be underrated.

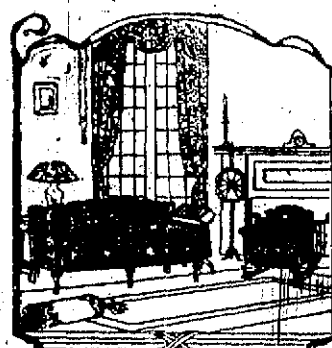

"A serious cause for four years' restriction of steel and by reduced output after the armistice cannot be made up in the near future by any country except the United States. Yet in the first calendar year after the war American pig iron output dropped to 2,013,000 tons, which was 8,000,000 tons below that of 1918 and practically the level of 1913. The fact that this reduction occurred without financial or industrial disturbance is a matter for congratulation, but in view of the five years' accumulated need of steel throughout the world it is a calamity. The first three months of 1920 showed an expanding rate of production, but the railroad strike brought about a serious reduction, so that the April output of pig iron dropped to 2,740,000 tons. The total for the first five months of 1920 was 15,000,000 tons. In spite of this production, production in the United States is being maintained at a rate more than double the present output of Germany and the United Kingdom combined.

"Despite unfavorable exchange, Canada must buy American sheets and plates to keep the wheels turning in her own industries. The United Kingdom received much larger quantities of steel ingots and billets from the United States in March, 1920, than during the corresponding month of 1919. Steel for ship-building was exported to France in April of this year in spite of exchange difficulties, and shipments of steel plates to Italy in March exceeded those made in March, 1919. It is to be expected that foreign consumers will restrict their purchasing at these in response to the disadvantageous exchange conditions, but in such periods the shortage grows and must eventually be met.

"Even assuming production of pig iron in 1920 equal to that of the best year, and a rate of export somewhat higher than that of the pre-war year, the exportable surplus of the United States is not likely to equal Germany's annual exports in the years immediately preceding 1914. The United Kingdom is unable at present to recover her former volume of exports except at a sacrifice of domestic needs. There can be no question, therefore, as to sufficient foreign output for all the United States can have and more. The American iron and steel industry has the resources, the capacity and the industrial organization to produce largely beyond the needs of this country, to maintain production at a point where the industry can do its share toward satisfying the world-wide need of steel."

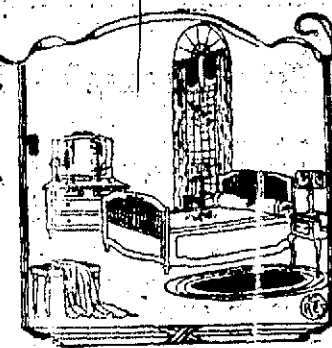

Steel Shareholders Increase. The stock dividend of the United States Steel Corporation, payable June 30, will be distributed to 37,220 shareholders, the highest on record. This compares with 33,532 three months ago, the previous top mark, an increase of 3,688. Previous to this year the highest record was 73,015 reported in 1919.

QUICKER REPAIRS OF COAL CARS IS A NEED OF TRADE

Can Be Accomplished If Labor Would Display Greater Application and More Activity.

Throughout the country the cry is for more cars. Of course, money will purchase cars and the delivery thereof can be secured after some months, but the quickest result can be secured by greater loading of equipment and the faster movement thereof. There is not much to be said, we know, in regard to greater loading of coal equipment, but certainly there is much to be hoped for in the way of quicker movement of same.

Aside from the labor difficulty following the switchmen's strike trouble at some places, increased movement would best be secured by a greater supply of motive power. This in turn can best be obtained not by ordering new engines to be delivered months hence, but by securing quick repair of locomotives now laid up, says Seward's Journal. As it is, switchmen are held back not only by the eight-hour law, but by machinists soldiering on the job under the influence of the recent Railroad Administration policies.

Some speeding up at the repair shops would accomplish wonders in the larger distribution of coal. This would be brought about by a relaxation of union rules that would admit of men making minor repairs to cars scattered about terminal yards. As it is now, crippled cars must be placed on the repair tracks before a union shopman is allowed to touch them. In earlier days when railroad employees were responsive to the orders of their official superiors, it was no necessary to send a car to the shops in order to have a new bolt put in or some other present-day labor unionist, the ancient prophet was a weak and spineless fellow to submit to such tyranny. Nowadays a car must be brought to the shop and placed on the repair track before a workman will so much as tighten a nut. This means long delay to much needed equipment, for the shops are always crowded and when a car has to take its turn it may be out of commission for weeks while waiting for a repair job that can be performed in 10 minutes.

Railroad Morale and Government Operation

From The Bachs Review

The effects of physical neglect and down to the loneliest track walker. He can be remedied; the shortage of power and equipment can be made up; and financial credit, through industry, economy and tireless energy, can be gradually restored. But there is a deeper, more fundamental cause of the trouble. It is the loss of an asset which the railroads had before they were taken over by the government, but which has not been returned—namely, the loyalty of the personnel to its employment.

It is said that from 1830 to 1917 the pride and glory of the American railway system rested on the unflinching industry, energy and esprit de corps of its employees, from president to the loneliest track walker. He quotes from an editorial in the youth-erhood organ of the employees for May, which says in part:

"Yes, it is a safe bet that we have witnessed the passing of the once numerous type of railroad men who took pride in their work and considered no sacrifice or risk too great to set results for the company. Those same men today are content with merely trying to hold their jobs. The old interest and the old pep are things of the past, for the railroad officials have surely lost their grip."

To competition, Mr. Thompson thinks, the companies must look for a revival of that loyalty upon which they were wont to rely to overcome all difficulties. Coordination or consolidation, he thinks, will not do it. They have helped to smother the esprit de corps among all classes of employees, substituting for rivalry in achievement a mild form of sabotage—a minimum of work for a maximum of pay. Coordination and consolidation may breed economies and dividends, but as they do so competition they do not breed progress.

"Competition, which has always been considered the life of trade, is also the life of man's loyalty to man and to his employment; and to the means of his physical, mental and social advancement. Would coordination or consolidation have given us the 'Twentieth Century' or the 'Dixie Railway' or the 'California Limited' or the 'Golden State Limited' or the 'Overland Limited'—in mention a few of the trains that daily set the pace from Chicago, east, south and west, for the rest of the Union? Not in a thousand years. True, these trains are luxuries, but in their rivalry they feed the spirit of emulation and competition that spurs progress throughout the entire transportation industry."

Government management ruins every business it touches. It broke up the morale of the railroads. It congested the movement of freight cars and more, until last fall the whole system congested, and it is from that congestion, which lasted all winter and grew worse, that transportation today is suffering. From the day the government took over the roads they began to fall back and deteriorate. Equipment fell farthest behind. Why were not cars and locomotives ordered at once when needed (as they were needed), at the very beginning? Was it from a sense of economy? Seventy-five millions was spent by the government on a nitrate plant that never manufactured a pound of product.

Government temporary ownership touched the telephone system, the most perfect of any in the world, and it fell to pieces like a house of cards hit by a cannon ball. It has never recovered. Private ownership is dragging the wreck up the hill again, but it is a slow job. "Central," once a bright, quick, intelligent and dependable, although invisible helpmate to man, has become a far-off, inoperative, irresponsible, elusive and evasive and irritating number-mixer.

Isabel smiled indulgently at him. "Oh, sit down, Dr. John," she said. "I want to talk to you. We are engaged, you know, and engaged people ought to have a talk after the event, if not before."

"You understand how this happened," I suggested.

"I do," she said. "My mother is frightened. Jed has been trying to marry her."

"What can give him the privilege of such insolence?" I exclaimed.

"I imagine he is enamored," she said seriously. "It may seem impossible to you."

"Has this man approached you directly?" I asked.

"He has been gallant, amorous, sympathetic, tender, soulful, aggressive, pleasing, threatening, subservient and I think that is all—but only in response."

"I don't understand it," I said hesitantly.

"Neither do I," she said. "And I know just enough to know that I shall not understand it. I do not like to find feet to a bush, turned my face in the direction from which the shot came, got out my pistol and lay still.

After a minute or two which seemed a very long time, Jed's face came in view in the brush. He looked unharmed but seemed undetermined and cautious. I think he was uncertain whether to leave my body where it lay and have it discovered, or throw it into the river and have my disappearance unexplained. His decision was given him by the noise of a farm wagon approaching on the road, and he disappeared. I was ready to shoot him if he came near me.

I was young and had youth's confidence, but nevertheless this event would have sent me away from Hartley if it had not been for Isabel and Mrs. Sidney. They needed even my small help and I had to remain. I had to remain, but I had also to protect myself. Another thing Jed might not miss. On the way back to the house I thought out a plan which I believed would work. I inquired for Jed and was told that he was with Mr. Sidney. I found him there drinking, and my entrance gave him a shock which he plainly indicated. His fright made him so ugly that he was comic.

Mr. Sidney never liked to have his vicious drinking interrupted, but he always was good natured.

"Well, doctor," he said, "what now? Is Jed drinking too much for your health?"

At that moment no possible amount of liquor would have been too much for Jed. The wretch must have thought I was a ghost.

"Jed may drink himself to death, but all the same," I said, "that probably is the best end he can come to. I think he is galled to death, but I want to talk to him when you can spare him."

"We can't spare Jed to have him hanged," said Mr. Sidney. "He's too useful. Who else could drink my wine of an evening? Go along with the doctor, Jed, and see what he wants. It's probably a matter of pills or powder for me."

Jed was recovering from his shock, but he still showed the effects of it.

"No hurry," I said. "I'd rather wait a half hour, I'll be in my room."

I went there and wrote two letters. Both were to one point. They related circumstantially what had happened that afternoon. One I addressed to a lawyer I knew, and the other to Dr. Brownell. Jed knocked at the door as I finished them. He was still unharmed.

"I have something I want you to read," I said, and gave him the letters. He read them and nodded his lips.

"You don't need to talk, Jed," I said. "I'll do all the talking that's necessary. I am not going away. I am going to stay right here, and you'd better be very careful of my health. These letters go out tonight. The men who get them will keep their mouths shut as long as I am alive. If anything should happen to me, whether you had anything to do with it or not, you'd have a difficult time with a jury."

"It was a mistake," he said. "I would not do you any harm. I shot at a rabbit."

"Twice with a pistol, when you had a shotgun?" I said. "You did! I was the rabbit."

CHAPTER IV.

Jed came to me the next day in one of his candid moods.

"I did shoot at you yesterday," he said.

"I know you did," I replied.

"And you're wondering why and you're wondering if I intend to do it again."

"I don't wonder at anything you do," I said. "And you know that if you do it again, the evidence is prepared against you. I think I am perfectly safe. I know you are a coward."

"No, I'm not a coward," he said, as if he were bracing a foot and not making a boast. "I never do anything without a purpose, and when I have a purpose, I do it no matter what the consequences may be. The reason I wanted to shoot you was because you were engaged to Isabel. I intend to marry Isabel. Now I know that you are not going to marry Isabel. You are just the foolish fellow that her mother thought she could build up around Isabel and keep me from trying to marry her. Isabel doesn't want you. She is laughing at you. So we might as well be friends again."

"You preposterous old fool!" I said. "You senseless alcoholic! You are a violation of decency. You are a disgrace to old decency. You would sicken

WORKS HARD TO AVERT FLU EPIDEMIC

Government and City Health Officials Warn People to Keep Clean.

Stay Away from People with Coughs and Colds.

"Avoid crowds if you want to avoid influenza," says Association for Improving the Conditions of New York.

Keep your hands clean, drink plenty of fresh water, sleep with windows open; eat three uniform meals a day including a good breakfast.

People who have catarrh or frequent colds invite influenza, declares a prominent Kentucky druggist.

The membrane of the throat and nose is raw, sore and tender, and makes a lovely abiding place for germs to thrive and multiply.

It is advised that people who have made remedy that will bring relief in less than a day and will stop all discharge and mucus and heal the inflamed membrane in a few days.

Thousands are purchasing this beneficial remedy at some and anyone who has catarrh or a cold can do the same.

Four three-quarters of an ounce of Mentholated Arvine into a pint bottle, then fill the bottle with water that has been boiled.

Gargle the throat as directed and sniff or spray the liquid into the nostrils twice daily. It's a simple way to get rid of cold and catarrh and keeps the nasal passages and throat clean and healthy.

Venerable all through the dispensary. Mentholated Arvine in which containing exactly three-quarters of an ounce, which is all you need to make a pint of this healthful medicine.

the moral consideration of a rummy. If you ever associate your aspirations with the name of Miss Sidney again, I'll cut your throat with a paper knife.

Jed smiled and made no feeble denial.

"I am a more intelligent man than you," he said. "You are too simple for the complexities of life. You could not possibly be sufficient for a girl of Miss Sidney's character. She would die of boredom in six months. There is nothing preposterous about my candidacy for Miss Sidney. I am older than I'd like to be, but that's all."

"You are a hideous old fool," I said. "but I think I can handle you, and I give you warning."

"I am going to be quite friendly," said Jed.

"You better yourself," I said.

"Well, anyway," he said, "I'm friendly."

He proved to be so. The life of the house went placidly from day to day. Isabel, with a sense of our posturing toward each other, made mocking gestures of affection which shocked her mother. She particularly delighted to see Mrs. Sidney when Jed was serving dinner. I thought she would enjoy getting me shot in the back, but Jed had rated me finally as unimportant, which did my egoism no good. For such a reason to discard me, formerly betrothed as I was to Isabel, in his scandalous pursuit of that beautiful girl, was preposterous.

If Mrs. Sidney had known that I was ideologically in love with Isabel, she would not have sought relief from her distress by the arrangement which made me her daughter's protective fence. The only thing I could take credit for in this absurd situation was that Mrs. Sidney was not allowed to know the state of my feelings.

STEEL ACCUMULATES AT MILLS FOR LACK OF CARS TO MOVE IT

Coal Cans Priority Is Cause of Decrease, but Is Helping Out in the Fuel Supply.

Special to The Weekly Courier.

NEW YORK, July 7.—The American Metal Market and Daily Iron & Steel Report will review the steel and iron trade tomorrow as follows:

Car supplies for shipping steel products are distinctly poorer than a fortnight ago, and steel is accumulating at mills at a greater rate. Estimates of the total accumulation now run as high as 3,000,000 gross tons, equivalent to about five weeks of production at the rate recently obtaining.

or 10 per cent of a year's output at this rate.

At a considerable proportion of the mills the closing of finishing departments here and there has been forced by the accumulation of material. At such plants the production of steel is maintained, but the steel is held in partly finished form, as it can be stockpiled more conveniently in that form. Such accumulating is occurring in blooms, billets, slabs, sheet bars and skelp. There is not much accumulation of sheet bars as there are already large tonnages piled at producing mills.

Order No. 7, giving coal mines preference in car supplies, is credited with much of not all of the decrease in car supplies at steel mills. On the other hand the mills are better supplied with coal and the by-product ovens also get more coal, the result being that more pig iron and steel can be made while less can be shipped.

Most of the by-product plants are now operating full. Fancy prices, up to $18, have been paid for Connellsville furnace coke, but such a situation is not expected to continue long.

The pig iron market, at least in the central west, is now not a matter of the intrinsic value of the iron itself, but of the value of deliveries, the result being that Valley Bessemer and basic have advanced in actual transactions, to $45 and higher prices still might be paid for deliveries, while consumers show no interest in fourth quarter deliveries, whatever price might be quoted.

The finished steel markets are quiet but the attracts no attention now as the traditionally dull midsummer period has been entered.

PA KNOWS HOW TO DO IT

IRREGULARITY IN PRODUCTION CONTINUES FROM WEEK TO WEEK

What Is Gained One Period Is Lost the Next, and So the Order Goes.

SHOWS HOW COMPLETELY

The Coke Trade Is Dominated by the Transportation Situation and That,
In Turn, Reflects the Disorganization of the Railroad Employees.

From The Weekly Courier.

The irregularity in production of coke continues with a persistence regularity. The gain of a few thousand tons one week is neutralized by the loss of a corresponding, or greater, amount the following week; or the loss of one week is recouped by the gain of the next. When the number of ovens is increased a slump in car supply, or other cause prevents a corresponding increase in production. Sometimes the blowing out of a number of ovens takes place at the same time some propitious circumstance results in a swelling of output.

That it goes from week to week, the explanation always being expected to happen, and it usually does. The most recent instance is that of last week. Although there was a slight net gain in productive ovens there was the rather unexpected decrease of 7,300 tons in production, following sharply upon a week which showed a gain of 6,600 tons. But that week had in turn followed one developing a loss in almost equal amount.

All of which demonstrates how completely coke production is being regulated by the transportation situation which, as the writers of the dailying newspaper, increase in production, in dealing with the railroad employees wage demand, will ever remain as one of the "horrible examples" of government-political interference with a great industry. Had either the fairness or good sense been exercised in an adjustment of the questions at issue before the railroad employees were driven to their desperate situation to take the strike in their own hands, the blighting upon transportation and the loss of morale and sense of loyalty among employees resulting from the economic so-called "outlaw" strikes, would have been escaped and long since the railroads would have been functioning adequately and industry and business generally would have been upon the highway of a great prosperity. With the paralysis of transportation there has come a tightening of money whereby the very fountain heads of commerce and industry are being dried up, which is but one of the penalties the country is having to pay for the insane and foolish policy of the government in putting off the settlement of the railroad wage questions from day to day and under 27 varieties of pretext.

To the credit of the executives of the railroads serving the coke region it can truthfully be said that they are doing their best and the utmost to interpret the orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the matter of applying the coal car priority. If cars are not placed in larger number and with regularity it is because they are not being delivered to the roads supplying the region. That the stream of revenue empty or outgoing load-trains not flow smoothly it is because of the interruptions caused by the congestions at distribution and terminal points, which conditions are, more than anything else, the fruit of the disgust railroad employees feel at the long continued delay of the Railroad Labor Board in reaching a decision on the wage question.

The following of Sunday by a holiday enabled the railroads of the region to make a fair accumulation of cars, to supply up to and including yesterday having averaged about 50 per cent. It will doubtless be materially less during the remainder of the week, the supply for today's loading having been almost a minute quantity at a late hour yesterday. The process of sending coke cars from coal cars is now in progress, as one of the interpretations the railroads are placing on the priority order. What the result will be remains to be seen, but it is not improbable that coke will suffer in proportion as coal is benefited.

The receipt of information that the labor troubles on the piers at tide-water have been settled will no doubt revive activity in export coal shipments.

The estimated production of coke during the week ending Saturday, July 3, was 178,250 tons, credited to the two districts as follows: Connellsville, 96,180, a decrease of 6,050 tons; Lower Connellsville, 79,110, a decrease of 1,270 tons, or a total decrease of 7,320 tons, as compared with an increase of 5,330 tons during the week preceding.

By contrast the production was as follows: Connellsville, 112,250, a decrease of 7,050 tons; merchant, 66,940, a decrease of 140 tons, as compared with gains of 5,320 and 1,040 tons respectively during the week ended June 26.

The number of active ovens made a net gain of 37, 30 having been blown out at Connellsville and 137 brought back to service at the merchant operation. The changes, which were credited to the Lower Connellsville district, were as follows: Added, 34 at Connellsville, 26 at Griggs No. 1, 124 at Connellsville, 30 at Mount Hope, Out, 38 at Connellsville and 30 at Republic.

Arbitrary Assertion.

"Now you assume to speak with authority on this subject, which you are not entitled to do," said the speaker, "but I'm afraid it won't do any good. You wouldn't be allowed the explanation either."

A Long Process.

"I don't quite understand your position in this matter," said the speaker, "but I'm afraid it won't do any good. You wouldn't be allowed the explanation either."

At the Theatres

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE UNKNOWN RANGERS." With Max Baer in the feature role, and a chapter of "The Silent Avenger," starring William Duane, are being presented today.

Throughout the five reels there is plenty of action, highly dramatic scenes and some of the most thrilling stunts ever caught by the camera are shown in this drama of the old fighting West.

The story concerns the efforts of "The Unknown Ranger" to round up a band of desperate opium smugglers who are operating on the border line between the United States and Mexico.

It is ticklish business to go after such people and it was the duty of the young ranger to "get them."

How he accomplished this and at the same time won the girl of his heart is thrillingly told in "The Unknown Ranger."

THE SOISSON.

"THE BEAUTY MARKET." In which Miss Katherine McDonald, one of the most beautiful women on the screen, is seen in a splendid role, is today's leading attraction.

An Amelia Thirndike, Miss McDonald takes the part of a girl who is hopelessly entangled in a net-work of debts and indifferent love affairs in an expensive society set. Amelia's poor finances makes it imperative for her to marry a wealthy man if she is to continue with the people she has been accustomed to.

Asherton Gaylord, a wealthy munitions manufacturer, puts out the word. He is in love with Amelia and promises her the real financial backing which she has lacked during the most of her society career. Amelia accepts a platinum brooch for an engagement present, knowing that she must pawn this present to society's Uncle Isaac in order to meet bills which her creditors are enraged about.

Amelia is ready to take the gift, but Isaac, when Captain Kenneth Laird, millionaire and soldier, induces her to avoid embarrassment and pawn the gift to him. He gives her a check for $1,500 for the brooch not knowing that it is an engagement present.

A reporter for a society scandal sheet serves to discredit Amelia with Gaylord and involve Captain Laird in a distasteful scandal. Gaylord rushes to the apartment of Laird intent on vengeance, when events take a sudden and unexpected turn, and Amelia confronts a new kind of marriage game wherein she is compelled to give as well as receive.

A Forgotten Stage.

Where is that man's smiling thrill which in our youth we knew? "Oh! Isaac finds some mischief still. For his hands to do!"

The Ideal.

"Pop, why do they call in some places a political party the Extreme Left?"

Soldiers of the Amateur.

"What makes you think our friend knows very little about running a railroad?"

"The fact," replied M. Dumila Stax "that he is so willing to try it."
